DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on Nov. 25, 2005 has been en

Double Patenting

2. With the abandonment of Application no. 09/743,255, the double-patenting rejection is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

4. Claims 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Morgenthaler [US 6,310,609 B1] in view of Over et al [US 6,363,264 B1].

Regarding claim 5, Morgenthaler teaches a telecommunication terminal

Art Unit: 2646

(i.e. a mobile phone), comprising:

a microprocessor having a menu structure with options (col. 2, lines 48-67);
an input device (i.e. keypad) (104) via which a user of the telecommunication terminal a modification of option function [col. 6, lines 33-67]; and at least one of an optical display and acoustic display [Figs. 1-4, 5A-5D; col. 1, lines 20-29; col. 1, line 48 to col. 2, line 29; col. 5, lines 11-52; Abstract].

Morgenthaler does not teach expressly a memory table (i.e. list) with key words that are assigned to an option, wherein the key words are selectable via the keys.

Overy et al teach a memory table (i.e. list) in a microprocessor (4) shown in Figs. 1-3, the memory table including catch-words (i.e. speed-dial words or keywords) with each catch-word having an option function allocated thereto [col. 8, line 56 to col. 9, line 16; Fig. 4], wherein the catch-words selected by the user via the input device (i.e. keypad 9), wherein the soft keys (14, 15) of the keypad are programmed to function as speed-dial keys [col. 4, lines 413-19]; wherein a respective option function is immediately implemented for modification after the respective catch-word is selected [col. 9, lines 36-50]. It is nevertheless a teaching tone of ordinary skill in the art to apply the same to other systems.

At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of Overy et al with Morgenthaler in order to speed up the process of executing a menu option [Morgenthaler; col. 3, lines 8-19].

Regarding claim 6, Overy et al further teach the terminal, wherein the catch-words of the memory table are selected via at least one of alpha-numeric input keys [col. 3, line 53 to col. 4, line 7].

Regarding claim 7, Overy et al further teach the terminal, wherein at least parts of the memory table (i.e. list) are edited via the input device (104) [col. 9, lines 36-50].

Regarding claim 8, Morgenthaler and Overy et al teach that their devices are mobile telephones. In addition, Morgenthaler discloses that his invention may be utilized in any wired or wireless communication that comprises a keypad to direct an internal command sequence [Morgenthaler; col. 9, lines 15-25]. However, they do not specify that the sets may be a DECT or GSM handset.

At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art that the communication device would have been a DECT or GSM handset (or any other brand or standard of telecommunicationsn device) for the purpose of allowing the invention to be used by users of all telecommunications terminals.
